Tier 1: Tabletop Quality

This is the typical level selected for most larger armies. Warhammer 40K, Age of Sigmar, etc., present well at this level. Models painted at this tier are fully based, have minimal freehand work, and have at least one highlight. Infantry look great at this level when present on the tabletop en masse.

Tier 2: Character Quality

This is the minimal level for large vehicles, standard terrain, and large monsters. Characters and games with low model count look great at this level. These will look great when photographed up close, or when picked up and examined by friends when you place them on the table. These models are fully based, with some special base work possibly added, may have some more intricate freehand work, and have two or more highlights.

Tier 3: Display Quality

This is the highest level that we offer, and should be reserved for that special model. Large vehicles, special characters, or that model that should lead you to victory with its brilliance are all appropriate at this level. Models at this level feature extensive use of advanced techniques. They may have extensive freehand, or extravagant bases (including display bases). These models look magnificent when viewed very closely.
